Genesis: In the Beginning (Part III)
Julie Reese

The first book of the Bible is packed with information about the creation of the universe, broken and restored relationships, and God's revelation to and guidance for humanity who continually turned away from Him. All women are welcome to join us as we continue to dig deeper into this fascinating book filled with the early history of characters and events that continue to show us God's plan for the world and our role in it. We will be resuming our study in Genesis 15 7:00 - 8:00 p.m.

Marriage and Family Relationships
Wes Bontreger

Many marriages (and any relationship), even among Christians, face challenges to nurture and grow with one another. In this class we will reflect on what builds up and tears down marriages and relationships. Whether married 30 years, 10 months, in a period of dating, or interested in relationships in general, join us as we explore the joys and challenges of this intimate relationship. Topics will include myths about marriage, love styles, habits of happiness, communication, understanding the other gender, good fights, and sharing spiritually. Materials from recognized marriage experts, Les and Leslie Parrot, will be used.

Technology and Faith
Doug Gerber

The average user checks their phone once every 4.3 minutes. Congregants can join live-streamed services and events from home. How does that affect our relationships, our fellowship, our life, and our faith? We will be using a book by Tony Reinke, "12 Ways Your Phone is Changing You," and other resources, including Biblical perspectives, to help clarify our call for Christian fellowship within a technological world.
